

Born: New York City

CEO of FOX Entertainment

He is a second-generation Greek-American, born in New York City. As a young man he worked as a sailor on a tanker for a summer because he had a great desire to travel the world. After finishing law school he moved out to Los Angeles, landing jobs with such companies as Paramount and Lorimar. He was voted one of 2005's Showmen of the Year by Variety (along with Tom Rothman, the other co-president of Fox) for the quality of the studio's productions and for the economic results he brought Fox. Gianopoulos has been a member of the Army Archerd Fund's Board and longtime supporter.
