

A bill prepared by a group of cross-party MPs in the UK will seek to return the Parthenon Marbles to Greece 200 years after they were removed from the Athens Acropolis, according to a report in the British press.

According to the Independent, the Parthenon Sculptures (Return to Greece) bill will be introduced by Liberal Democrat MP Mark Williams, backed by Conservative deputy Jeremy Leroy and another 10 MPs from Labour, the Scottish National Party (SNP) and Plaid Cymru.

MP's in UK will debate this bill today, on this day of Monday, July 11, 2016

The British Museum through a legal process has rejected calls to the Ottoman Empire, which had Greece